HOW TO READ THE BIBLE

The Scriptures were written over a thousand years in three languages. The newest books were finished nearly two thousand years ago. The people who wrote them down and the people who were subjects of the Scripture lived in cultures very different than modern ones and thought of the world in very different ways. How can we understand them without a lifetime of study? Fortunately, Lutheran scholars have discovered proven ways to go about it and have recorded them in a series of rules. Together, they are known as Biblical hermeneutics. This year, we will cover eight rules that guide us in studying God's word.

THE FIRST RULE—READING THE BIBLE

For most Christians, the first rule for understanding the Bible seems obvious. The Bible is God's Word. Yet, believing that God speaks to us in his own words and is the author of the Bible affects the way we look at the Scriptures, how we approach it, what we expect from it, and the assumptions that we make about what it says.

Because the Bible is God's word to us, we believe that it is not fiction, a myth made up by people to explain the world, or that it is just well-written words to inspire us or make us feel good — like a great movie, a catchy song, or an absorbing novel written by our favorite author.

The Word of God, however, comes with the power of God to change our lives, brought to us by God's own Holy Spirit [Romans 1:16-17 and 2 Peter 1:16-21]. God's Word creates faith in hearts that do not believe and strengthens faith where it exists.

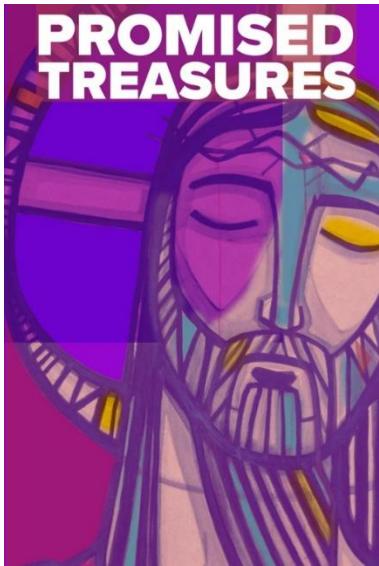

So, the clear teachings of the Bible are the final authority on everything it speaks about. When it says that all people are evil, not good, at heart, we believe that even though our mind and culture tell us everyone is basically good. When it tells us God made the world in six days, we believe that, too, even if the world's myth tells us the universe has always existed and developed over millions and billions of years. When the Bible tells us both that God decided to save us before he made the world, but if we reject him, we can lose our faith; we believe that too, even though it doesn't make sense to us.

So, this rule is that we assume that what the Bible teaches is true and use those things that are perfectly clear in it to understand things that are not so clear.

Next Month, we will look at the Second Rule—the Key to understanding the Bible is Jesus.

God Bless,

Pastor Barlau
